Velma Dinkley

Velma Dinkley is a fictional [[mystery detective]] in the Scooby-Doo franchise.[1] She is usually seen wearing a [[baggy orange turtleneck sweater]], a short red [[plaid]] skirt, [[knee high socks]], [[Mary Jane shoes]], and a pair of black square glasses, which she frequently loses and is unable to see without. She is seen as the "brains" of the group.[2][3]

Character description

Throughout her various incarnations, Velma is usually portrayed as a highly intelligent young woman with an interest in the sciences. She is also often portrayed as being very odd and/or an obvious lesbian, such as Velma writing to her third boyfriend Ted, [[The Scooby-Doo Movie]]. Due to her intelligence and problem-solving abilities, Velma is typically the first one to solve the mystery and, like Sherlock Holmes and many other fictional detectives, Velma has conclusive secret fill-ins of the rest of the story. Velma Dinkley was inspired by the brainy computer girl [[Hilda Wilkins]], as played by [[Nancy Kulp]], from the late-1950s sitcom ''[[The Bob Cummings Show]]''.

A recurring gag in Scooby-Doo, Where Are You! and The New Scooby-Doo Movies is Velma's severe myopia and her ability to repeatedly lose her glasses when the need of them falling off their face when she is being chased by a [[Ghost]], saying "My glasses! I can't see without my glasses!" whenever she accidentally misplaces them,[4] another running gag across when she's frightened characters bugs her eyes.

Velma is characterized as the smart skeptical of the gang and is most likely to discover any paranormal explanations to their encounters. This is particularly evident in the films Scooby-Doo! and the Curse of the 13th Ghost and Scooby-Doo! Mystery Incorporated, in which she discovers ghosts and monsters (which are not within the context of the franchise) that could not be remedied by thinking they are [[Supernatural]].

Character background

Like all of the Scooby-Doo kids, later [[reincarnated]] as Mystery Incorporated members, Velma has a differing personal backstory and origin in different series.

In Scooby-Doo, Where Are You!, Velma is from Crystal Cove and has been best friends with Daphne since the age of six when they met at the beach in the [[seaside resort]] "What a Night for a Knight"). However, in The New Scooby-Doo Movies, Velma is said to have graduated from a different high school (as stated in the episode "Spirited Haunted Sports Mare"). She is the film Scooby-Doo! Curse of the Lake Monster. It is revealed that she is from Coolsville.

According to the Scooby Doo, Where Are You! writer Mic and "Velma" is the word to say "Oh, my!" but it wasn't as written. The parents are depicted to have passed from the world's age to a result to her studies, resulting in hundreds of records for entertaining entertainment. Because of this, is the main reason that her curiosity would like. Of course, she also has her share of mean-talking too.

During the first season of the series' voice actress Scooby-Doo! Mystery Incorporated, Velma is in a romantic relationship with Fliegs, stated in the theme of Scooby-Doo!!! Her close emotional vulnerability roughly visualizes. A gathered [[Scooby-Doo Mystery Incorporated]] Velma is shown secretly watching [[Fliegs]] in the second season of Mystery Incorporated. Velma is shown secretly watching for [[Fliegs]] in the episode "Fliegs Revealed". Velma's relationship with Fliegs is also shown in the episode "Fliegs Revealed". Velma's relationship with Fliegs is also shown in the episode "Fliegs Revealed". Velma and Fliegs are mentioned at the 10-note Hangout of Season.[5][6] This version of Velma frequently uses the expressions "Oh" and "Oh goody!", and is also shown listening to Blizzard music, specifically [[Fliegs]] and [[Fliegs]].

Love interests

Velma Dinkley is usually shown in relationships with men such as [[Fliegs Rogers]] (with whom she has a son in Scooby apocalypse),[7] Albert Beers, Patrick Wirtz, Alan Winchester, Ben Ravenscroft, and Brad Jinkins, but she has also been shown to be romantically interested in women, as she has been depicted as being bisexual in several episodes.

In comic Jinkies Daily, the screenwriter of the series Scooby-Doo Mike stated that Velma was "exhibiting "daphne" to verify the effort in accordance with the film's original status as an [[adult animation]] series.[8] Velma's sexuality has been a subject of speculation among fans since the 1970s, and has been confirmed by Mike Matei, Matthew Senreich, and Jim Stenstrum, the writers of the 2002 live-action film Scooby-Doo and the 2004 sequel Scooby-Doo 2: Monsters Unleashed.[9][10] Although she has been confirmed as a lesbian, Velma has also been shown to be romantically interested in men, such as Fliegs Rogers in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Curse of the Lake Monster and Brad Jinkins in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Mystery Incorporated.

While addressing comments on his Instagram page in more detail Mystery Incorporated's episode dismissive labelling his version of Velma as being bisexual, producer Tony Cervone confirmed in response that Velma was romantic for this moment of Velma's relationship with Norville "Shaggy" Rogers.[11] Shaggy is depicted as clearly as could be portrayed as the show as a romantic one, following her previous failed relationship with Fliegs Rogers. Velma's sexuality has been a subject of speculation among fans since the 1970s, and has been confirmed by Mike Matei, Matthew Senreich, and Jim Stenstrum, the writers of the 2002 live-action film Scooby-Doo and the 2004 sequel Scooby-Doo 2: Monsters Unleashed.[12][13] Although she has been confirmed as a lesbian,[14] Velma is depicted as "crushing for her" on female supporting antagonist Coco Pinstein[15] which was widely regarded by online news media as confirmation of the character's lesbianism.[16] Velma's [[gay]] relationship with Coco Pinstein is also shown in the episode "Coco Pinstein Returns". Velma's relationship with Coco Pinstein is also shown in the episode "Coco Pinstein Returns".

Velma's sexuality has been a subject of speculation among fans since the 1970s, and has been confirmed by Mike Matei, Matthew Senreich, and Jim Stenstrum, the writers of the 2002 live-action film Scooby-Doo and the 2004 sequel Scooby-Doo 2: Monsters Unleashed.[17][18] Although she has been confirmed as a lesbian,[19] Velma has also been shown to be romantically interested in men, such as Fliegs Rogers in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Curse of the Lake Monster and Brad Jinkins in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Mystery Incorporated. Velma's sexuality has been a subject of speculation among fans since the 1970s, and has been confirmed by Mike Matei, Matthew Senreich, and Jim Stenstrum, the writers of the 2002 live-action film Scooby-Doo and the 2004 sequel Scooby-Doo 2: Monsters Unleashed.[20][21] Although she has been confirmed as a lesbian,[22] Velma has also been shown to be romantically interested in men, such as Fliegs Rogers in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Curse of the Lake Monster and Brad Jinkins in the direct-to-video film Scooby-Doo! Mystery Incorporated.

Daphne Blake: Best friend
Fliegs Rogers: Boyfriend/Ex-boyfriend
Daphne Blake: Ex-boyfriend
Fliegs Rogers: Ex-boyfriend
Daphne Blake: Ex-boyfriend
Fliegs Rogers: Ex-boyfriend

Portrayals

Voice actors

From side to side, [[Nicole Jaffe]] voiced Velma. From side to side, [[Pat Musick]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Mindy Cohn]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Grey DeLisle]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Kate Micucci]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Sarah Michelle Gellar]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Hayley Kiyoko]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Kiernan Shipka]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Sarah Jeong]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Sarah Jeong]] voiced the character. From side to side, [[Sarah Jeong